FREW & CAMPBELL,

WEDNESDAY, OUT. 10, 1877.

THE story of Gilman, the New York forger, is the familiar one of a man's living beyond his income and then turning criminal to keep it up. It seems that his friends have been surprised for some time the number is increasing at so rapid a rate that either a new prison will have to be established or an enlargement of the present one made. The cost of the institution for the two years ending June 30, last, was $385,298, and its earnings $85, 883-showing a net cost to the State of about $150,000 a year. The cost of each prisoner per annum is $160. Only 235 of the convicts are employed at service, the State receiving for their hire fifty cents a day. The directors say that if the price was put down to twenty-five cents a day, they could hire out 690 more of them, and the institution be made almost self-

The most interesting thing about it to us is that Hofer's investigation lead him directly to the conclusion that we are rapidly ex-hausting the Pennsylvania reservoirs of petroleum. The northern oil district was pumpeddry, says Hofer, in ten years, and wells generally cease to yield after three years. The time may not be far distant when, instead of exporting 200,-000,000 gallons of illuminating oil, as we did last year, we shall have to import it, perhaps from the Black sea region, where Moukhtar and Melikoff are having their

In the meantime America is taking advantage of the costliness of English manufactured articles to compete with her in all the markets of the world.

That the Greenbackers Want.
A leading greenbacker of Chicago, in relating an instance in which her mate What the Greenbackers Want. onse to a formal interrogatory by the Tribune of that city, says that the programme of the greenbackers is as follows, as he understands it:

To sum up the matter, the Greenbackers are "aiming at" the accomplishment of the following objects:

The remonetization and free coinage of

The repeal of the so-called Public

At the Stock Exchange we have in the market for speculative shares a continuance of the movement so notionable of late, and the highest prices thus far this year have been made. The "short interest" is diminishing, and we have no doubt that by this time there are many who are convinced that it is dangerous, whether prices represent values or not, to be "short" of a market which has behind it more capital than ever before

He is believed to have begun forging a dozen years ago, when he left his first modest residence for an expensive establishment, and has been getting deeper ever since, till the exposure came on Toesday.

The elevated street railway in New York is steadily growing in business and fame. The travel during September, this year, was 46 per cent larger than the corresponding month last year. The present road is on the weat side of the city, along the Huddon, and the Company are just about to increase its facilities wo as it as opported to he built on the east side, connecting the Brooklyn bridge and the down-town ferries, by the way of Broadway and Third avenue, with the Grand Central Depot, which it is estimated will cost $1,000,000.

Drendful Accident to a Nailer.

Pittsburgh Evening Issaer of Mondry.

An accident of a pecutiarly distressing character occurred this morning at the nail factory of Chess, Smyth & Co., on the South Side. George Green, who is employed as a nail-cutter at the establishment, was the victim, and the facts, as given to our reporter, are as follows:
The belt that run on the pulley of the machine had been covered with oil, as given to our reporter, are as follows: The belt that run on the pulley, and Green, gathering up a handful of cotton waste, held it against the inside of the belt, while it was in motion, for the purpose of removing the oil. Unfortunately he was not careful enough in doing this, and his shirt-sleeve was caught between the belt and the pulley. Instantly becoming aware of his dangerous predicament Green endeavored to within head was dashed against the nail machine, and a projecting bolt, affixed thereto, entered his skull near the left temple. Before the machine could be stopped he was drawn among the wheels, and beside the terrible wound in his head, received severe internal rinjuries, several of his ribs being broken. As soon as the engine could be stopped he was extricated and medical assistance summoned, but there is scarcely a vestige of hope for the recovery of Green.

-The ideal perfect life that men imagine is always one in which pain forms no part; yet curiously, in all the life know, pain is ever the penalty paid for JOHN BRIGHT is concerned touching the future of the manufacturing industry of England. He says that the shortened hours of labor and the increased compensation given to English workingmen are placing his country at a disadvantage manual through nervous shock. A sax manual through nervous shock. A sax manual through nervous shock. A sax manual through nervous shock. placing his country at a disadvantage with other nations, where labor is cheaper and the hours of labor longer. Good wages and short hours act as high impost duties in increasing the cost of production. It is a fact that England's supremacy in the markets of the world is being questioned in every nation; in Germany, France, Spain, Italy, even in her own dependencies of Australia and Canada, protective tariffs have been established or are about to be instituted to encourage home manufacturing industry at the expense of English trade. John Bright's complaint as to the high wages of the English workingman proves what has long been suspected, that the tradesunions in England have been very effective in enhancing the prices of wages and shortening the hours of labor. The panic and the subsequent hard times have allowed the subsequent hard times have allowed the most unfortunate. > Childhood's Misconceptions. In the October number of the Atlantic Monthly Mrs. Edward Ashley Walker, writing of the curious misconceptions of childhood, tells the following amusing relating an instance in which her unste contrived to "wreat," to her own "undoring," a stanzo of Pope's Universal Prayer, which both had learned by rote. In the pillow fights with which each happy day began, little H—noticed that sithough they were equally matched in valor and dexterity, the most formidable missile at hand, namely the bolster, was never under any provocation of opportunity or direct need used by her sister. After accepting this advantage as long as her magnanimity would allow she at last called M—'a attention to her oversight of this superior ordnance. M—only shook her head with portentous significance When H—insisted on explanation it came in a curdling whisper, heard with bated breath: "Oh, but I don't dare touch that! Don't you remember what that verse says?

"Let not this weak, unknowing hand Presume thy Boilster boils to I trow."

"Let not this weak, unknowing hand Fresume thy Bolster (boits to) throw, And deal damnation round the land On each I judge thy foe."
